

quite sure whether he isn't the brother-in-law of his own wife, and you can't blame him much for rarin' around and tearing up the carpets and the furniture.

The bride and bridegroom say they're happy. The Lady Betty, lately Mrs. Roy Pierce the first, says she's just tickled to death, but anything that peeved old man Pierce would tickle the Lady Betty.

OUTSIDE NEWS FROM WIRE AND CABLE

Lawrence mill strikers are holding mass meeting this afternoon to celebrate their victory. Mayor Scanlan issued an order prohibiting the gathering, but the strikers went ahead with their plans, and leaders said there was no possibility of a hitch in the settlement.

House rules committee is planning trip to Lawrence to further investigate charges of brutality, made by the strikers. Probe may take in entire textile industry, including southern mills.

William J. Bryan, who was thrown out of a convention in Nebraska for advocating prohibition, denied today that he would work for such a clause in the Democratic platform at the national convention.

Twice in the same place would be too much.

Daniel O'Connell, Pittsburg, has appealed to the police to help him recover his teeth. He says his wife swiped his false grinders following a quarrel, and he has eaten nothing but milk and broth since.

An army, seeking to restore the monarchy in China, is marching on Peking. Yuan Shi Kai fears the recall, with the additional inconvenience of having his head lopped off.

Twelve Wichita, Kan., women laid a sidewalk last night over a stretch of street that the city had refused to improve for two years.

All right. But how are the Wichita hens laying?

Pinto, Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt's prize bull dog, did not drip a bit of cream on the table at the luncheon given in his honor at a fashionable Palm Beach cafe.

The "wire" is discreetly silent as to the actions of the other guests, and you can draw your own conclusions.

Such words as "Oh, hell!" and "damn," which appear in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," need not be read by the girls in the eighth grade of Flushing, L. I., schools, according to officials there.

Oh, Fudge!

Jules Vedrines, Paris, will use an aeroplane in making his campaign as candidate for deputy in the district of Limoux.

Do tell! Some of our politicians right here at home are up in the air.

Rats dyed different brilliant colors were liberated by the health department of Seattle, Wash., in order to trace the drift of the rat population in different parts of the city.

Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, Cleve-